Bond and Taylor on Trial for Murder.

THE STRUGGLE FOR A | JURY.

A Little Sensation in Court-As to the Duties of Jurors-The Evidence To-day

Another murder case is on in the Third District Court.

This time it is that of the People, etc. vs. John Taylor and Philip Bond, who, it will be remembered, occupied the county jail -they having been committed without bail-since the 7th of July lest until a couple of weeks ago, when they were arraigned on the charge of murder in the first degree and removed to the Pen.

Both men are miners, but there all similarity between them ends. Taylor is a short-legged, big-bodied man, with a foot that for shape and size is unrivalled in this section of the world. He has blonde hair, a meek blue eye. and a peculiar gait.

Bond is a rather larger man, dark swarthy complexion and a black moustache. He has a rather romantic air about him, and dresses neatly.

The defendants are represented by Dickson and Hoffman, and the interests of the prosecution are being looked after by Messrs. Peters and Clark. The en tire day was occupied in an effort to obtain a jury, and it now appears as though the case would last a couple of days longer, at the least.

THE CRIME

for which the defendants are being tried was the murder of James Osborne, which is alleged to have occurred on the 3d day of J. ly last, at Biogham. Both defendants appeared cool and collected, while the juries were being secured, save that Bond was noticed to flinch a little when the prosecuting attorney put little when the prosecuting attorney put the question to each juror as to whether he (the juror) had any conscientious scruples against finding a verdict where the punishment might be death. At least fifty-five jurors were examined before the required dozen was secured, and during this there was a little sensation in the court. Frank Sheldon was being examined as to his qualifications, and in answer to a query of the prosecution he said yes, he had conversed with people about the case. The question "with whem?" was answered by "The gentleman is present in the room." This seemed to satisfy the prosecution, but when the defense demanded the name of the individual demanded the name of the individual with whom he had talked about the matter, he named a fellow juror, Mr. Fabian, who had been examined and Fabian, who had been examined and excused a few moments previously.

THE JUDGE-That is even worse. YOU MUST REMEMBER what I have told you, or punishment may follow.

At poon only nine jurors had been secured, and twenty names were drawn from the jury box, with instructions to return as many of them as possible by 2

At 2 o'clock most of the gentlemen sent for were present, but this list was exhausted long before twelve had been secure, and another draw on the box used up all the jurors within easy reach. Here was a "state of things," but it was promptly met by Mr. Dickson's suggestion that the box might be filled given, and the deputies were out soour-ing the town " lew seconds later-for six, the number thought to be required. The six gentlemen responding, how-ever, were not satisfactory either to prosecution or delense, and ten more were sent for. Finally, after the entire day bad been spent, and fifty five per-

A MEAN OLD THING.

Pretty Stenographer.

The following will be interesting news to the many who became acquainted with "Judge E. C. Ruggles," the portly, aldermanic individual who figured so prominently in the cases brought against Friend and Osbourne, and which created no little comment here last fall.

WICHITA, Kas., March 9 .- One of the most sensational affairs that ever happened in this city was the elopement of Judge E. C. Ruggles with Miss Mattie Steinmetz, his pretty stenographer. The parties left the city together about two weeks ago, and the deserted wife and daughter, both prominent in society circles, have eyer since been carefully guarding their secret. But to-day, in spite of their efforts, the matter leaked out, and is now the sole topic of conout, and is now the sole topic of conversation. Judge Ruggles is a man of 45, who came to this city about five years ago from Ohio. He rapidly rose into prominence, becoming one of the leading lawyers of the State, and at the same time acquiring considerable property. The companion of his flight is a handsome young lady of not over 18, of voluptious figure, bright and vivacious, who came to Wichita about a year ago from southern Ohio. Soon after her arrival, she secured a position after her arrival, she secured a position as stenographer and private secretary to the judge. An intimacy sprang up between the two, which was marked by their more intimate friends. Whenever the lawyer was called away his private secretary accompanied him. About a month ago he conceived the idea of moith ago he conceived the idea of writing a legal treatise upon the marriage relations, and had erected, adjoining his house, a small building, and there, in company with Miss Steinmetz, his time was mostly spent. The members of his family were not allowed to enter, for fear of disturbing him. In the meantime, he was disposing of his property. Everything was either sold or mortgaged, even to his law library. Just a week ago he left, not even deigning to give his wife a word of explanation other than to state that he was called away on business.

When a brother of the young lady learned of the state of affairs, he started learned of the state of affairs, he started in pursuit of the elopers. He succeeded in locating them at Salt Lake, from which place the judge wrote that he would marry the young lady as soon as he could get a divorce from his wife. The brother arrived in Salt Lake to enforce the promise, but the birds had flown leaving no trace behind. flown, leaving no trace behind.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company The Mutual Life Insurance Company.

The annual statement of The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, published in the Sunday Herald, shows that the year 1887 was the most prosperous one this company has ever enjoyed. The new business written amounted to $69.467.468.37, or an increase of $12.624.749 over the new business of 1886. The assets of the Mutual Life now aggregate the enormous sum of $118.806.851.85, making it by far the largest financial institution in the world. The company has now an outstanding insurance account amounting to $427.628.933. It received for premiums to $427,628,933. It received for premium in 1887 the sum of $17,110,901, and its total income from all sources amounted to $23,079,922,46. It paid to its members to $23 079 322 46. It paid to its members during the year for death claims and end-wments over $8,000,000, and the total payments to policy holders aggregated $14,128,423.60. The number of policies was increased to 140,943, the largest number in any regular Life Insurance Company in the world. This year the State Department required the Life Insurance Companies to compute the reserve value of policies at 4 per cent, instead of 4½ per cent, as hitherto, which increased the liabilities as charged by the Department. Under this sever a requirement the Mutual Life showed a surplus of $6,294,492 over and above every liability.

IT PEELED HIS NOSE.

Trouble.

From an Idaho correspondent, we have shooting affray which occurred near Chesterfield recently. One night as a man named Jos-ph Cole, a laborer on King's ranch, was returning from a party given at a point about two miles distant, he was fired at from a clump of brush, the bullet pa-sing close to his horse's head. Frightened at the sudden attack he put spurs to his horse and dashed on. When he reached the ranch he told his story, but was laughed at by his comrades, who treatest the story as a hoax. A few days afterward-, however hoar. A few days afterward, however, they became convinced that Cole had told the truth. Returning home from anoth r ball. Cole was met near the north ga'e of the ranch by a fellow, who immediately upon seeing him rai-ed a gun. As he did -o, Cole commenced to run, and the fellow then fired, the bullet burning his nose. When he to run, and the fellow then fired, the bullet burning his nose. When he reached the ranch he was almost paralyzed with fear, and again he told the story of his attack, this time, however, exhibiting his nose. The boys in charge—J. Balfour and J. Munroe—armed themselves and followed the would-be murderer for over a m le but finally lost track of him. There is con-id rable excitement over the occurrence. Cole is much respected in the community, and it is thought jealousy over the rivalry for the hand of a young lady of Chesterfield was the cause of the attack.

Funerals,

The funeral services over the remains of the late Robert Stewart, who was accidently killed a few days ago while in discharge of his duty at the Utah Central depot, were held in the Fifteenth tral depot, were held in the Fifteenth Ward Chapel on Sunday under the direction of Bishop Joseph Pollard. The large hall was very appropriately decorated, and was crowded to its fullest capacity with the many friends of the deceased and the employees of the Utah Central Railway. The deceased had no relatives in this country.

The singing was by the combined ward choir and glee club under the direction of T. C. Griggs, Prayer was offered by Peter Reed, after which appropriate remarks were made by propriate remarks were made by Hamilton G. Park, who had known the deceased ever since he was a boy. Re-marks were also made by the following gentlemen in the order named: Francis cope. George G. Bywater, John Sharp, and Bishop Joseph Pollard. The glee-club, of which deceased was a member, sang "Rest," and benediction was pronounced by Zebulon Jacobs.

A very large procession of carriages followed the remains to its last resting aleas where the delicatory prayer was place, where the dedicatory prayer was place, where the dedicatory prayer was offered by James Sharp.

There was a large audience gathered on Sunday afternoon in the Twentieth Ward Meeting-house to attend the funeral services of the late Joseph G. Romney. This, however, was naturally to be expected when the reputation and the region of the decreased and the wide character of the deceased and the wide character of the deceased and the wide circle of his friends acquaintances and relatives are considered. The services were under the direction of Elder W. C. Dunbar. The speakers were, in order, Bishop James Watson, Joshua Midgley, Bishop George H. Taylor, Elias Morris, John Nicholson, and John Sharn, who all hors witness to the Sharp, who all bore witness to the high worth, intellectuality and moral integrity of the decased, along with words of cheer and comfort for those immediately bereaved. Some of the speakers had been intimately acquainted with him both in a business and social way, and they regarded him with feelings of the profoundest confidence and esteem.

Joseph G. Romney was no ordinary man, possessed of literary abilities of a high order, actuated by noble and ele-vated impulses, had his opportunities been more fortuitous, there is little question that he would have attained considerable eminence as a writer, and have arrived at something more than a merely local fame. From early vouth he was noted for an insatiate thirst for knowledge, which, in early years after the settlement of this valler, he satisfied as best he could, with the scanty morsels which chance threw in his morsels which chance threw in his way. Many times as a boy did he pick up stray bits of paper, the sports of an idle wind, and peruse them with perhaps more eagerness than does the average youth the choicest volume. But with years came more extended facilities, and to him it was a labor of love to gather tome after tome, until at the time of his death, his library had grown into a large and costly collection of many hundreds of volumes, making, perhaps, one of the finest private libraries in the whole Territory. With such tastes, it is but natural that Mr. Romney should have possessed a cultured mind and superior attainments; and, indeed, only a few moments' conversation was suffi-cient to mark him as an unusually well-informed and intelligent man. Another distinguishing trait was his retiring disposition and scorn of ostenta-tion and display; and so strong was this latter characteristic in him that he re-quested his family to wear no mourning at his death. Always honest and out-spoken, he was ever true to his convic-tions, despising all traces of hypocrisy and deceit. His writings in this journat under the name of "Gaskell, tending over a long period of years, best portray his character and motives, and mark him as a man of exalted aspirations and a broad and noble liberality of mind. In the death of Joseph G. Romney the community suffers the loss of a respected and valued citizen.
